DORIC ORDER TABLE

TC03 LIMESTONE & WOOD

The Doric column is one of the three classical orders of ancient Greek and later Roman architecture. Originating from the Doric region in western Greece, it is essentially the simplest of the columns, yet it features intricate details in its upper parts. Greek Doric columns are characterized by fluted or smooth surfaces, a relatively thick and sturdy shaft, and a solid, majestic appearance. Notably, they do not have a base and are typically placed directly on the stylobate or platform of temples and buildings.

MIRROR

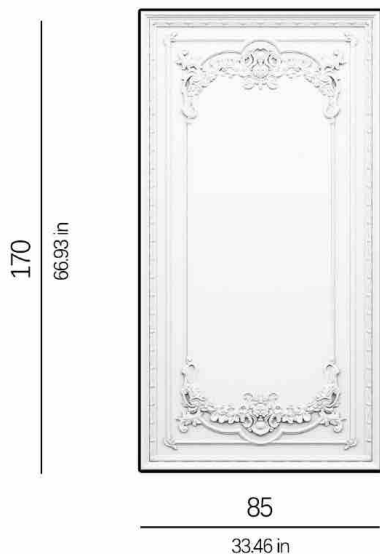

MI01 LIMESTONE

In the interplay of light and shadow, the Versailles Echo limestone carved mirror embodies the romantic opulence of French royalty, transformed into a tangible work of art. Crafted from natural limestone, each groove carries the imprint of time, and every curve revives the classical elegance of European design, infusing your space with timeless sophistication.

Made from premium natural limestone, its warm, enduring texture and unique mineral veining give each mirror a distinct character. Hand-carved motifs—scrolls, roses, and symmetrical Baroque-style frames—recreate the refined grandeur of 18th-century French court aesthetics, turning everyday reflection into a visual masterpiece.

Inspired by the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles and Rococo art, the frame features layered acanthus leaves, classical columns, and embossed roses, paired with antique gilded accents. It balances vintage elegance with modern interiors, blending historical grandeur with contemporary style.
